Portraits of Qing meritorious officers in the collection of the State Hermitage:
scroll restoration and revised reading of the texts

Abstract: The finished restoration of the portraits representing prominent Qing officers kept in the collection of the State Hermitage resulted in a possibility to not only prove their artistic value, but also to read the eulogies written by Emperor Qianlong in Manchu and Chinese. As a follow-up of our previous paper<sup>1</sup> we are presently able to become certain that the State Hermitage has five portraits (of Yeotun, Fusil, Cebdenjab, Bolbunca and Guwandase), originally from the Ziguang-ge Pavilion (Hall of Purple Glaze), which made it to Germany in the early 20th c., and then, after 1945, to Russia. The analysis of the texts has revealed the peculiarities of Manchu and Chinese poetry at the same time proving that both versions of the eulogies were written in accordance with corresponding poetic rules thus becoming variations of the same topic.

Key words: portraits of Qianlong meritorious officers, Qianlong's poems, the State Hermitage, the Manchu language, the Chinese language

Our paper "Portraits of meritorious officers from the collection of the State Hermitage museum" published in "Pis'mennye pamiatniki Vostoka", issue 2(15), 2011<sup>2</sup> contained the first ever presentation of four portraits representing four heroes of the Eastern Turkestan raid and painted in 1760 for the Ziguang-ge Pavilion (Hall of Purple Glaze) of the Imperial Palace in Peking. The State Hermitage received these portraits after WWII from the Ethnological Museum in Berlin; for a long time they were kept in a secret storage. The scrolls had been badly damaged during the Berlin battles of 1945, and it was not before 2007 that they got delivered to the Hermitage

Laboratory of scholarly restoration of fabrics and water colors. At that moment, their condition was described by the experts as follows: the previously restored scrolls had been completely pasted over paper; both the fabric and paper were coated with a layer of starch-based glue, the silk and paper having been strongly destructured and soiled with dust, soot, and ash; their surfaces displayed multiple brown spots and dense rust. The paint was peeling off the over-dry and deformed, partly destroyed silk base; the remaining parts were frayed and torn. The edges were burnt and threadbare.

The complicated and time-consuming restoration of these four scrolls had been conducted in 2007 through 2014 by artists A.F. Alexandrova, L.E. Kovaleva, and N.Yu. Liakina who described the process in the following way: the layer of paint was fixed; the spots of rust were softened with chemicals; all fragments were cleansed with water solvents. After that, all parts of the scrolls got joined anew over a dubbing silk basis, the dirt and pasted-over paper having been removed. The complexity of this work resulted from the fact that the fragments were to be joined from the front side; that required immense care and accuracy, ruling out any possibility of the glue soiling the neighboring parts of painting. The work was considered finished when the scrolls were cleaned and dubbed, their deformation removed, and the whole of the original basis, restored.

Yet before the end of restoration works, motivated by the chance to introduce the exhibits from the former German collection, in 2011 we attempted publishing four of these portraits as they were at that time. Then, the Laboratory had seven scrolls, but only five among them portrayed Manchu meritorious officers, and at that moment only four could be unfolded without fear of damaging them. Our reports on the restoration and the value of these portraits have been presented at several international conferences.<sup>3</sup>

Once published, our paper and the work over the portraits caused significant interest of our German colleagues,<sup>4</sup> which attested of the importance of the artifacts for learning the original compound of the Hall of Purple Glaze, as its collection has by now been scattered all over the world. Meanwhile, the work went on, and the restoration conducted at the State Hermitage resulted in our having not solely the portraits themselves, but also the significantly damaged texts of the eulogies in Manchu and Chinese. Our first paper already contained detailed descriptions of the portraits painted on these four scrolls; we provided information about clothes and uniforms, and attempted to read and interpret legible words and phrases.<sup>5</sup> Thanks to the restoration, we have managed to read the Manchu and Chinese texts anew, to correct previously made mistakes and to correctly split Manchu lines in accordance with the alliteration of Manchu poetry.<sup>6</sup>

In that, we were assisted by the paper “Die ehemalige Sammlung von Porträts verdienter Offiziere der Feldzüge des Qianlong-Kaisers (China, 18. Jahrhundert)” by Hartmuth Walravens,<sup>7</sup> providing descriptions of the scrolls containing the portraits and prior to WWII kept in Berlin, at the Königliches Museum für Völkerkunde, presently the Ethnological Museum and deemed irretrievably lost. That publication is highly valuable, also because it presented archival photographs of 15 portraits (out of 16), among which there are also those presently kept at the State Hermitage.

All portraits are uniformly shaped as vertical scrolls with eulogies in Manchu and Chinese written over them in black ink; between the dates, each one displays a red oval seal reading Qianlong yulan zhi bao 乾隆御覽之寶

“A treasure having the highest approval of Qianlong”. The previously published four portraits display dates in Manchu: Abkai wehiyehe-i šanyan muduri aniyai niyengniyeri (the spring of the White Dragon year of Abkai wehiyehe) and Chinese: Qianlong gengchen chun 乾隆庚辰春 (the spring of the gengchen year of Qianlong) which corresponds the year of 1760. The fifth portrait bears a later date: Abkai wehiyehe-i fulgiyan bonio aniyai niyengniyeri (the spring of the reddish monkey year of Abkai wehiyehe), in Chinese Qianlong bingjia chun 乾隆丙甲春 (the spring of the bingjia year of Qianlong) or 1776. Below the texts, every scroll has the full-length portrait of a chieftain.

Presently we can introduce the texts in full along with their translations.<sup>8</sup>

The eulogy on the first scroll (ref. No. VF 2801) is dedicated to keterkei baturu (outstanding hero)<sup>9</sup> Yeotun who belonged to the Pure Yellow banner and served in Butha. He is known to have been a marksman who killed a tiger during an Imperial hunting in Mulan. In 1755, he participated in the Eastern Turkestan raid after which was appointed the commanding officer of the Mongolian Boarded White banner in Qiqihar.<sup>10</sup>

The Manchu eulogy is written as two stanzas with initial alliteration, the first one beginning with i, the second with e. Noteworthy is the fact that the Manchu text provides more information than its Chinese counterpart: it indicates Yeotun’s origin in Manchuria, “he hunted near the river Ula”. Each line of the Chinese version has four characters with a caesure in the middle;

<sup>8</sup> We made our first attempt to analyze poetic peculiarities of Manchurian and Chinese eulogies accompanying these four portraits in our report during the 7th International scholarly conference “Problems of literatures of the Far East” in 2016 (PANG 2016: 473–481).

William F. Mayers in his manual of Chinese titles “The Chinese Government” suggests the following explanation of baturu: “The military distinction called in Chinese Pa-t’u-lu (a representation of the Manchu word baturu, signifying ‘brave’) is an institution dating from the early years of the present dynasty, and is conferred solely for active service in the field. It constitutes an order of merit partaking of some characteristics of the French Légion d’honneur; but its special feature of difference from a European order consists in the fact that it has no outward mark of decoration to be worn by its possessor, in the place of which there can only be reckoned the distinguishing word (or title) which is assigned to each recipient on the bestowal of the order. These specific titles may be either Manchu, Mongolian, or Chinese, the Manchu being considered the most honourable. Under this system an officer upon whom the distinction is conferred might receive the designation Yih Yung Pa-t’u-lu 毅勇巴圖魯, or “Bat’uru with the title Magnanimous Brave”, and so forth. The title carries with it the right to wear the peacock-feather.” (MAYERS 1886: 67).

the eulogy contains references to Chinese classics. For instance, shenshou 生手 “with bare hands” can be found in the “Tang Anthology” — “Quan Tang shi” 全唐诗 (QTSh, j. 23) and the Song collection “Detailed Chronicles of the Taiping Years” — “Taiping guangji” 太平廣記 (TPGJ, section jing cha 精察, chapter Wei-Xiansheng); the expression tang nang qui 探囊取 “to get into a sack and produce easily” is encountered in the novel “Journey to the West” (XYuJ, ch. 8) and history of “Three Kingdoms” (SGZh, ch. 23); the verb yueli 閱歷 “to learn from one’s own experience” is there in the “Detailed Chronicles of the Taiping Years” (TPGJ, j. 4); the word shizhi 世職 “a hereditary title” can be found in the Song encyclopedia “Highly Approved Collection of the Taiping Years” “Taiping yuelan” 太平御覽 (TPYL, j. 430).

The two stanzas of the Manchu text have initial alliteration, the first one beginning with h, the second with e.

The Chinese text is written in four-syllable lines with caesuras in their middle and contains expressions borrowed from classical writings. For example, baidao 白刃 “white blade” is common in the novel “Three Kingdoms” (SGYYi, ch.6), the Song poems and the “Tang Anthology (QTSh, j.866); hui-huo 揮霍 “to fly up- and downwards (about a sword)” can be found in the Song encyclopedia “Taiping yuelan”, in “Taiping guangji” and “Tang Anthology”; fuque 弗卻 “to keep one’s ground”, in “Meng-zi” (MZ, ch. 13).

Qianlong's eulogy on the third scroll (ref. No. VF 2820) is dedicated to General Cebdenjab (Chinese Cebudengzhabu) (1705–1782), Khalkha-Mongol of the Bordjigit clan. His father had been married to a Qing princess. In 1755, he won his spoors during the Davatchi and Amursana crackdown, and in 1758, took part in the battle of Horgos. In 1771–1773, he remained the ruler of Khalkha.<sup>13</sup>

The two stanzas of the Manchu text have initial alliteration, the first one beginning with ya, the second with e.

The Chinese text written in four-character lines with caesuras in their middle contains the following expressions borrowed from classical writings: yuzhan 猶斬 “to chop” encountered in the Song encyclopedia “Taiping yue-lan” (TPYL, section bubo, ch. 6); fuque 弗卻 “to keep one’s ground”, in “Meng-zi”; paima 拍馬 “to hit a horse with a whip” is common in the novel “Three Kingdoms” 三国演义; expressions suoxiang 所向 “on his way”, guming jiang 古名將 “great General of the ancient times”; chaoyong 超勇 “exceptional courage”, in “History of Three Kingdoms” 三国志. The Chinese text also clearly indicates Cebdenjab’s relation with the Royal family: his father was an efu, i.e. the husband of the Emperor’s seventh daughter.

Qianlong's eulogy on the fourth scroll (ref. No. VF 2821) dated of 1760 is dedicated to General Bolbunca of the Aola clan, serving with the Manchu-Solon Blue Boarded Banner.<sup>14</sup>

The two stanzas, four lines in each, of the Manchurian text have initial alliteration, the first one beginning with u, the second with d.

The Chinese text written in four-character lines with caesuras following the second character follows the regular Chinese model. While the Manchu text is devoid of any hidden meanings and perfectly clear, its Chinese counterpart contains a few allusions to classical writings. For instance, jueshuo 矍鑠 "vivid (strong) in old age" can be found in the Tang dynasty "Yi wen lei jui" — "Collection of diverse from art and literature" (YWLJ, j. 18, section "About men") and in Ma Yuan's biography (14 BC–AD 49); he lived in the time of the Han dynasty and was a famous military chieftain revered by the Manchus for his fidelity to the throne and care about his soldiers in the field. The word jubuo 巨擘 "leader" was first used by Zhu Xi in his commentary upon "Meng-zi" (MZZZh, ch.10), while wan wu shi li gong 輓五石力弓 is often there in the Song encyclopedia "Taiping yuelan" 太平御覽. The expression shazei 殺賊 "to kill bandits" is common in the novel "Three Kingdoms" 三國演義.

The fifth scroll from the State Hermitage collection presently undergoes restoration, but we have gained access to this portrait (according to WALRAVENS 2013: 135, its old ref. No. I D 22221). It represents a warrior wearing a winter yellowish-brown robe and a checkered green apron over it. Over the apron, on the waist level, there is a lily bandolier with ten sections and a brown powder flask. Behind his back, there is a saber, its sheath fixed to his belt. His footwear consists of winter boots with thick soles. On his head, he wears a round uniform hat with sable edging and rank distinctions: a coral sphere on its top and a peacock feather with one eye (kongqiaoling). With both hands, he is holding a musket on his left shoulder. The badly damaged text reads that the portrait depicts the commandant of town Datong in the Shangxi province, Second-rank General bardan baturu (proud hero)<sup>15</sup> Guwandase (Chinese Guandase). The publication of an archival German photo and the full text of the eulogy made it possible to restore the fragments missing from the scroll.<sup>16</sup>

The Manchu text is split into two stanzas with the first line starting with i, the second one, with t. The Chinese text contains words and expressions borrowed from classical compositions, e.g. lianhuan 連環 “inseparable unity, chain” frequent in the novel “Voyage to the West”; huogong 火攻 “attack with fire, shelling” can be found in “Collection of diverse from art and literature” (YWLJ, j. 80) and is common in the novel “Three Kingdoms”; shuailing 率領 “to lead, to head” can be encountered in the novels “Journey to the West”, “Three Kingdoms”, and “Jin ping mei”; xuekong 穴孔 “hole” was used in “Taiping yuelan” (TPYL, j. 17); duyong 獨勇 “lonesome hero” — in “Taiping yuelan” (TPYL, j. 75).

Unlike the eulogies accompanying the previous four portraits, this text is dated of 1776. It was written after the second Jinchuan campaign (i.e. suppressing the Sichuan rebellion of 1771–1776) which attributes the Guwandase portrait to the second series of those intended for the Ziguang’ge Hall of Purple Glaze. Military chieftains Yeotun, Fusil, Cebdenjab, and Bolbunca had fought in the first campaign against Eastern Turkestan (in 1755–1757), so their portraits belonged to the first series of portrait scrolls with the eulogies dated of 1760.

The analysis of the eulogies by Emperor Qianlong shows that they reflected the poetical rules of their corresponding languages. Manchu texts followed the Manchu canon presuming initial alliteration, while those written in Chinese observed the rule requiring a four-syllable line with a caesure following the second word. They are written in accordance with the rules of Chinese classical ode. However, the most essential feature of the eulogies in Chinese is Qianlong’s allusions to Chinese classics, which was typical for Chinese traditional poetry. The eulogies accompanying the five portraits kept in the State Hermitage make it possible to define those literary and historical sources which were used by Qianlong. Among them, there were the Song encyclopedia “Taiping yuelan” 太平御覽, the Song collection of stories “Taiping guangji” 太平廣記, “History of Three Kingdoms” 三国志, “Collection of commentaries to Meng-zi” 孟子集注, and the “Tang Anthology” 全唐詩, novels “Three Kingdoms” 三國演義, “Journey to the West” 西游記, i.e. compositions of the Ming and Song periods well known at the Manchu court.<sup>17</sup> No hints at Chinese texts have been traced in the Manchu version, which leads to the conclusion that Manchu eulogies were not straightforward translations from Chinese (or vice versa): these versions strictly followed the poetic rules of their languages thus actually becoming two variants of the same topic.

The restoration and conservation of the portrait scrolls conducted at the State Hermitage Laboratory for scholarly restoration of fabrics and water-colors yielded fantastic results: there have been revealed artistic peculiarities of the portraits and identified the people represented in them. It is therefore possible to say that presently the State Hermitage has five portraits (of military chieftains Yeotun, Fusil, Cebdenjab, Bolbunca and Guwandase), originally from the Peking Hall of Purple Glaze Ziguang-ge which had been brought to Germany in the early 20th c., and later, after 1945, — over to the USSR.
